Press Release

July 5, 2002

Dr. Charles Mellinger was recently selected to serve on the Advisory Council for the Southern Region Pest Management Center housed in Gainesville at the University of Florida. By creating and maintaining a solid information network, the four regional Pest Management Centers aim to inspire pest management decisions that are both environmentally and economically sound. The Advisory Council collects input from pest management stakeholders. While this store of information is used by the Pest Management Centers to advise EPA, USDA, and other stakeholders, it is also an essential component in advancing effective communication among stakeholders. Further information on the Pest Management Centers can be reviewed at www.pmcenters.org.
